In the show Alone, 10 people separate and try to survive with only a backpack of resources, dropped off in the middle of nowhere, with no one but themselves. They have to document themselves with a camera that is provided to them. If they need to leave they are provided with a satellite phone to call the rescuers. Depending on which season you watch the person who survives the longest (the winner) will win either $500,000 or $1,000,000. The participants will have to find food on their own, find water, and build shelter. My opinion on this series is that it is not the best. In my opinion it is very repetitive. What I mean by this is that the viewer will constantly see them hunt for food, try to find water, explore, and finally go to sleep. For me this is not very interesting, but to other people this may be the best thing in the world. I can see how this would be interesting to some people, mainly the danger aspect of it. The thrill of the ride as some people would say is very interesting and entertaining to people. This can also appeal to people who like survival and documentaries. This show has action but the action is real world action. When I think of action I think of two superheroes duking it out in the middle of the city, but again, some people's idea of action is the real world type of action, and this is the perfect show for them.

How did I find the film on Kanopy?

I found it by browsing around.

Did the presentation of information keep you interested?

No.

What was the pace of the film, too slow, too fast, or just right?

A little too slow.

What grade level is this film appropriate for?

Grades 4 and up.

Rating:

I give this film a rating of 2 stars (I did not like this film, but somebody else might).

This film is not very good because in one of the episodes it showed one person hunting for food, and then it switched over to another person and they were also hunting for food, which backs up my claim that it is very repetitive. This occasion happens in many different times.
