The documentary Steve Jobs - One Last Thing discusses the lifetime and legacy of arguably one of the most influential figures of all human history: Steve Jobs. The documentary is filled with information about and interviews with Jobs. The film includes both factual information about Jobs and the experiences of some people who interacted with him. The film provides a balanced view on Steve by showing both the good and bad sides of him. His successes are discussed but his failures are also talked about. Some of the people that worked with Jobs praise him and describe him as a genius, while others have a more negative view on the man. The documentary does a great job of presenting the information and gives the audience a mostly complete picture of the life and legacy of Steve Jobs. The film also talks about what Steve Jobs believed had influenced him to become the man that changed the way we interact with our world. Along with interviews with Jobs, the interviews with people that worked alongside and were friends with him helped to provide an understanding of what the man was like when he wasn't on the stage presenting some new revolutionary product to an audience.

How did you find the film on Kanopy (by title search, subject search, casual browsing, etc.)?

I found the film on Kanopy by searching for films related to computer science and technology.

Did the presentation of information (for documentary) keep you interested?

The presentation of the information kept me interested at most points, but sometimes the visuals on screen weren't the best.

Was the pace of the film too fast, too slow, or just right?

The pace of the information given was just right.

What grade level(s) is this film appropriate for?

I would recommend this film to anyone grades 6 and up, however I think anyone who can watch this film and understand it can enjoy it.

I rate this film 4 stars.

The documentary was very interesting to watch and presented some things that I did not know about previously. The reason this film does not get a 5 star rating from me is because I felt that the film did not spend enough time talking about the iPhone specifically, which was arguably the most influential vision of Steve Jobs. The film was also a little uninteresting to watch visually at some points, but overall the film was enjoyable and interesting to watch, and I would recommend it to anyone interested in technology and documentaries.
